Now is Allen Thorndyke Rice's opportunity to revenge the snub he received from United States Minister Phelps. As our representative to the court of St. James has entered the lecture field, he becomes legitimate prey for magazine reviews, and greater men than the Vermont lawyer have winced under their sting. To introduce the lecturer to the readers of the North American will give far more notoriety to the recipient of such favors than his refusal to present the editor at court. Mr. Phelps lectured before the Resears is the dawn of the morning institute of philosophy in Edinburgh, on of liberty to all classes. Though acknowledged by all as a man well versed in his profession, there are no doubt salient points of attack, of which the carping critic can avail himself. That a minister Jacksbord, et al., must all look out for plenipotentiary should lecture seems somewhat out of keeping with the duties of his office.

SOMETHING TO BRACE UP ON.

The Republican newspaper organs are glosting over the election returns yet, in which they profess to read Democratic discomfiture and Republican gains. They are easily elated. And some of our esteemed contemporaries on the Democratic side, bewildered by this Republican fanfaronade, are half-way persuaded that the Democracy really sustained a serious set-back. These contemporaries are easily discouraged. The truth is that taking the country as a whole, the Democracy made a sweep of the field, and if the vote had been for a president as well as state officers, the Democrats would have captured the electoral college. This is clearly shown in a very compact table prepared by the Albany Argus, giving the states that went democratic, those that were carried by the Republicans and a list of those that were doubtful at the time the Argus printed its table, and appending the electoral vote of each state. The figures show that twenty states, with 207 electoral votes, gave clear and emphatic majorities for the Democratic tickets in said states. Twelve states, with 142 electoral votes, went Republican. There remained six doubtful states, with fifty-two electoral votes. The full strength of the electoral college is 401 votes, and at the time the Argus table was made up every one of those doubtful states could have been given to the Republicans and even then the Democrats would have had 207 votes, or six votes in excess of a majority of the electoral college. Later returns add one of the doubtful states, with eight electoral votes to the Democratic column, and the electoral college vote would therefore stand: Democrats, 215, and Republicans 186 tariff reduction. A SOUTHWEST INTER-STATE FAIR.

THE GAZETTE is aware that some of the leading spirits of this city have been deoating the formation of an association for the annual holding of a Soutawest Inter-State Fair and Exposition In this city. The men who are debating this project are the men who have led in every movement calculated to impel this city onward in its march to greatness, and if this scheme takes tangible form the country may we I be assured from the outset that

Mr. Pendleton has been faithful and sagacious and alert, and his time, ability and energy were all given to the public service. He takes his Democracy according to the prescription of Dr. Richard Coke, and in the recent election made a fight for straight Democracy, and won for the party a notable victory. Mr. Pendieton is a plain, unassuming, practical Democrat who believes Democracy to be all sufficient for the political needs of the people, and in his public service has emphasized that belief. The Democracy has occasion to put aside all who would remove the party further from the masses, and in Mr. Pendleton will find a legislative leader who has ever been near to the people, and one who will use all the powers of the speakership to direct legislation in the interest of the people, and thus pind his party more closely to them and the people more closely to his party. Democracy is the party of the people, Mr. Pendleton is a man of the people, and the more rigidly the party reserves its rewards and executive places for such men, the more surely will it maintain the confidence and support of the people.

TWO PLAIN DUTIES.

The present congress will have full three months in which to revise and make complete its record. The record make some concessions that were not claimed perfection for the Morrison bill, to some features. But the session should is concerned, it has a great deal to live principle of protection taxation. Again, this coagress ought to feel it a duty and privilege to act on the earnest and wise recommendations made by Mr. Tilden, just prior to his death, in regard to coast and harbor defenses. Democrats ought to take pride in putting Mr. Tilden's statesmanlike views into effect, especially when those views urge a policy that is absolutely non-partition and non-sectional in its scape and application. Republicans and Democrats will never agree on the tariff, but there is good reason to believe Republicans will not be found in the way protection of our coast cities, from the St. Lawrence to the Rio orande. The country is able to spead all the money that may be needed for this purpose, and the 4th of March ought not be suffered to arrive without action, specific and comprehensive, on this matter. The Democracy has a majority in the house and has three full months to work in. It lance which has made the city what it is, can do itself credit and the country serv-

If the individual who wrote that sentence and the men, who adopted it had fully understood the nature of a protective tariff they would have laughed it down.
